However, managers may refer their spouses or partners to any other position within Gentari India in keeping with the Gentari India Employee Referral Policy as mentioned in the Employee Handbook. Addressing Conflict of Interest

A “conflict of interest” refers to a situation where the interests of an employee, or a potential employee, or the organization, may be incompatible with those of another employee. This potentially poses material risks to all parties and may adversely affect the Gentari India workplace. While determining instances of conflict of interest, it is imperative to bear in mind the spirit of this policy and act in the best interest of the greater good of Gentari India and its employees.

When a conflict-of-interest or potential risk is identified due to a personal relationship between employees, Gentari India will work with the employees involved to consider options for resolving the problem. In such instances, it may first be decided that the parties no longer work together on matters where one is able to influence the other or act for the other. Matters such as hiring, firing, promotions, performance management, compensation decisions and financial transactions are examples of situations that may require reallocation of duties to avoid any actual or perceived reward or disadvantage. In some cases, other measures may be necessary, such as transfer of one or both parties to other positions or departments. If one or both parties refuse to accept a reasonable solution, such refusal will be deemed a voluntary resignation.

Failure to cooperate with Gentari India to resolve a conflict or problem caused by a personal relationship between employees in a mutually agreeable manner may attract disciplinary action up to, and including, termination.
